

What's Happening?

MPX is a rare disease caused by infection with the MPX virus. There is a current outbreak in Riverside County that is primarily affecting the easternmost cities in the Desert region, but we are also seeing cases in the western region as well. Cases in Riverside County are mainly among men who are between the ages of 18 and 65.

Outbreak Response

RUHS Public Health collects information about individuals who tested positive for MPX to better understand who is at highest risk and to guide vaccination, testing, and treatment. To help prevent the spread of disease, it is important to address disease outbreaks proactively to prevent larger outbreaks.

What's Available?

RUHS Public Health is offering information on how to access the following services for those who are at greater risk of exposure and those who believe they may have been exposed to the MPX virus:
